GREENE consulting engineers

9 March 2026

Mr Daryl Mack

FORMAL CONFIRMATION OF TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT – PROBATION PERIOD

This letter serves as formal confirmation of the discussion held on 9 March 2026 regarding your employment with Greene Consulting Engineers (Pty) Ltd.

For clarity and completeness of the record, the matters raised in your email dated 9 March 2026 are addressed below.

1. Confirmation of Termination

Your employment with Greene Consulting Engineers (Pty) Ltd is hereby confirmed as terminated with effect from 9 March 2026, during the probation period of your employment.

In terms of Schedule 8, Item 8(1) of the Labour Relations Act 66 of 1995 (Code of Good Practice: Dismissal):
"An employer may require a newly hired employee to serve a probationary period before the appointment of the employee is confirmed."

Further, Schedule 8, Item 8(2) provides that the purpose of probation is:
"to give the employer an opportunity to evaluate the employee's performance before confirming the appointment."

Following discussions held during your first week of employment, management concluded that the employment relationship was not suitable to continue. This conclusion was reached having regard to both the probation provisions of your employment contract and the conduct displayed during your first week of employment. In particular, your written correspondence dated 6 March 2026 records a refusal to comply with operational instructions issued by management, which constitutes insubordination and is inconsistent with the obligations set out in your employment contract.

2. Opportunity to Raise Concerns

You were afforded an opportunity to raise concerns during discussions with management during your first week of employment, including the meeting held on 9 March 2026.

GREENE consulting engineers

In terms of Schedule 8, Item 8(4) of the Labour Relations Act:
"During the probation period, an employer should give an employee reasonable evaluation, instruction, training, guidance or counselling."

During these discussions management engaged with you regarding operational expectations, assigned tasks, and the reporting structure within the structural engineering team.

3. Refusal to Comply with Lawful and Reasonable Instructions

In terms of Clause 3 of your Employment Contract, you agreed and undertook to obey all lawful and reasonable orders and instructions issued by any person employed by the company in a managerial or supervisory position, and further agreed that where necessary you would perform other suitable work within your vocational abilities.

During your first week of employment, you were issued with operational instructions by management regarding:

- the reporting structure within the structural engineering team; and
- the preparation of reinforcement detailing drawings and bending schedules as part of assigned work.

In your written correspondence dated 6 March 2026, you stated:
"I have been directed to take instruction from Ruan Van Zyl regarding this assignment. I want to respectfully note that as a candidate engineer working toward my PrEng registration with ECSA, I am required to work under the supervision of a registered professional engineer. A junior engineer without professional registration cannot fulfil this role under the Engineering Profession Act."

In the same correspondence you further stated:
"Rebar detailing is a draughting function. It falls outside the scope of engineering work required for my ECSA logbook and is inconsistent with the role I was hired to perform."

These statements constitute a refusal to comply with operational instructions issued by management. Such refusal amounts to insubordination in terms of recognised labour law principles and constitutes a breach of your contractual obligation to obey lawful and reasonable instructions issued by supervisory personnel.

Under South African labour law, refusal to comply with a lawful and reasonable instruction constitutes insubordination, which is recognised as misconduct.

The Code of Good Practice: Dismissal – Schedule 8 of the Labour Relations Act recognises that dismissal may be appropriate where an employee refuses to carry out lawful instructions or comply with workplace authority.

The instructions issued to you were operational in nature, reasonable within the context of a consulting engineering practice, and communicated directly to you. These matters were discussed with you in person during meetings with management.

4. Process Followed

Your assertion that a formal disciplinary hearing or performance review process was required prior to termination is not correct in the context of probation.

Schedule 8, Item 8(5) of the Labour Relations Act provides:
"An employer may dismiss an employee during probation if the employee is found to be unsuitable for the position."

During your first week of employment:

- discussions were held regarding operational expectations and reporting structures
- concerns regarding assigned tasks were addressed
- you were given the opportunity to raise your own concerns regarding the role and working environment

Following these interactions, management concluded that the employment relationship was not suitable to continue.

5. Professional Supervision

Your assertion that you were not assigned a supervising professional engineer is factually incorrect. In terms of Clause 1 of your Employment Contract, you were appointed as a Structural Engineer and assigned to report directly to Mr Larry Nell, who is a registered Professional Engineer (PrEng).

The organisational reporting structure within the company therefore complies with both the terms of your employment contract and normal professional practice within consulting engineering firms.

While candidate engineers may receive mentorship from registered professionals for purposes of professional development and professional registration, neither the Engineering Profession Act 46 of 2000 nor ECSA guidelines prescribe internal organisational reporting structures within an engineering firm.

Greene Consulting Engineers reserves all of its rights in relation to this matter.

For completeness, the decision to terminate your employment during probation was based on:

- the probation provisions of your employment contract;
- incompatibility with the operational environment; and
- refusal to comply with lawful and reasonable operational instructions issued by management.

Please arrange with myself, Rikus De Beer, or Tharina Grobelaar to return all company property issued to you, including the company laptop and any other equipment.
